MY LADY'S BONNETS

The Spring Opening of Jenkins and Darwin, with the beautiful display of attractive millinery exhibited by Mrs. Jarrett, was one of unusual interest. The pretty models, Miss Matalene Barnes, Kate and Floy Isbell were exquisitely gowned and exhibited a number of new and lovely models. Miss Kate Isbell wore a handsome black lace gown with wash of heavy yellow silk woven with silver; Miss Floy Isbell a dainty black lace costume, and Miss Matalene Barnes a stylish costume of embroidered gray cloth.

Among the hats displayed by these charming models were: A turban made almost entirely of rose pink, and purple roses, while another charming one was fashioned of soft blue straw braid and trimm d in grapes, with a bunch of grapes dropping from the brim at one side; a lovely large hat in the new shade of brown, with a wide, flat band of flowers in the shades of brown and henna, was very stylish; A gray turban with flower band; a black hat with blue brim and brilliant flower band; a rich blue turban made of iridescent braid with the front of field daisies in the pastel shades; another of Harding blue with clusters of pink clover massed around the band and dropping at one side; a tanshanger of brown straw trimmed in bright colored poppies, altogether made a display of hats that made one feel that springtime gentle Annie, had really come.

The music furnished by the Sparta Jazz Band was delightful, and these young men were so generous with their music, playing continually the newest things in popular music, that it made the afternoon more like a charming reception. The members of this talented band are William Young, piano, Joe Goff, drum and Herbert Wilson ukulele. Many in Cookeville will remember with pleasure the dainty French bride who appeared in an evening performance given here some time ago by the Hickory Nuts, and this dainty bride was this same Herbert Wilson, who seems to have more talents than one, excelling in music and dramatic art.

Those who came over from Sparta for the opening were, Misses Ruth Young, Mattie Lou Stacey, Mattie Pearl Gilliland, Mrs. Sid Dibreil, Mrs. Thurman, Mrs. R. L. Gilliland, Mrs. Gist, Mrs. S. D. Gilliland, Mrs. J. L. Lee, Mrs. R. L. Forsher, Mrs. Maggie Lou Gilliland and Mrs. Will Hunter.

Live Happenings From A Certain Business Corner Where The Local Scribe Hangs Out And Gleans News Worth While

In making my rounds gathering news in this live town, I passed "Mitchell's Place", the new "Arbiter Elegatorium" soon to open in the Arnold building. From all indications this is going to be one of the swellest eating places between Nashville and Knoxville, and if both those towns don't get a hump on 'em it is likely to surpass them in elegance.

I also noticed that the new buildings being erected by the Cookeville Building Co., on the Douglass lots near the square were rapidly going up, and a few more days now will find six or eight of them completed.

Passing the Big Brick on the Corner, the home of the live and progressive firm of McDearman-Williams Co., and seeing the crowds going in and coming out with numerous bundles, I was loth to stop and inquire why all this such, but the moment I entered I saw that I need not inquire, for the splendid display of the Suits, Coats and Dresses, Waists, Blouses, and Dress Goods, Novelities and Jewelry that this big store was showing, was a full and complete solution to my query.

Every week it seems that the Ready To Wear shown at this store grows in beauty and volume. Wish I had descriptive powers to convey to you a faint idea of the beauties of these garments, but I will not attempt the impossible, but only beg of you to take one day off and visit this store, and see and inspect these beautiful garments.

Miss Pearl Kuykendall's Hats appear to be growing in number, beauty and splendor. It is a well recognized fact, one that holds undisputed sway, that Miss Pearl is truly an artist in her line and her hats distinct, beautiful and artistic—few equal and none surpass. When you get it from Miss Pearl you know it's right. New hats and accessories arriving daily.

On Tuesday morning while, in the store of McDearman-Williams Co., I saw them open up and display one of the largest and prettiest shipment of dresses of the season. These were in browns, blues, navys, etc. Materials were taffetas, satins, and the new crepes, elegantly embroidered and showing the new braids. Prices were reasonable. In this department I noticed a wide range of prices. Suits ranged from as low as $9.75 to $70.00. Dresses were from $6.75 to $55.00. Coats and wraps from $9.00 to $45.00. A wide range and every one showing a splendid value.

Staple dry goods, I noticed, too, were low and reasonable. Dress gingham in beautiful patterns at 15 cents, 20 and 25 cents. A yard-wide Brown Domestic for 10 cents the yard. Big Remnant Rolls, a big value for $1.45. Men's best Overalls, only $.35 the pair.

I visited the clothing department of this store and really I was surprised to see so large a line as this firm is showing, and I was old that the business being done in this line by this store this season was far in excess of any previous season.

The buying public appreciates the big declines shown in clothing, and are showing their appreciation by donning a new suit. This firm notified me that they had just been notified by the makers of their famous 6121 guaranteed 100 per cent pure wool, velvet finish, Blue Serge Suit, that they could not accept another order for this season's delivery. This was bad news, for 6121 has won a permanent place in the hearts of the people of Cookeville and surrounding counties because of its unusual worth. It is recognized as the biggest Blue Serge value in America. A keen foresight of McDearman-Williams Co. caused them to stock heavily in this particular suit, and you can yet get your fit from their large stock, notwithstanding the manufacturers have withdrawn it from sale. The writer of this sketch was shown other suits for young men, in varied designs and colors of browns, greens, blues and mixtures. They were snappy, nobby models and are sure to please the good dresser, and these, we were informed were from the best manufacturers. Tailoring, fit, and durability guaranteed.

Glancing around at the many new things being received by this up-to-date store, I noticed their unusual large display of watches, both men's and ladies'. Upon closer inspection I found them to consist of a great variety with from seven to twenty-one jewel South Bend and Elgin movements, in gold-filled cases; prices ranging from $5.00 to $68.00. The display and quality of jewelry shown by this firm would grace any store in a town of 50,000. The fine quality and reasonable prices of this line should be, and is being appreciated by the people of Cookeville and surrounding territory. This store informed me that their jewelry sales were growing by leaps and bounds. That the people were learning that they could get the quality right here at home and much lower in price.

Visit this store. A trip through their big stock and an inspection of their goods and prices will, I have no doubt, prove both interesting and profitable.—Adv. THE SCRIBE.
